Education in Nakivale

Nakivale refugee settlement is in a state of flux. Many Rwandese refugees were expected to leave the settlement through voluntary repatriation, but few have gone home. There are also new arrivals to the settlement. The increase in the population is not catered for in the budgets of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) or its implementing partner. As a result, the infrastructure in the settlement is overloaded. For example, the numbers of pupils in primary schools was expected to decrease; however, the number of pupils at Kashojwa Primary School has gone up markedly over the past three years. In addition, land continues to be a contentious issue in the settlement and surrounding areas, with unresolved boundary disputes pending both in courts and between individuals on the ground. Tensions are high.

Despite these common difficulties, refugees and Internally Displaced People (IDPs) often see education of their children as the principal way of ensuring a better future for their family. Just as importantly, education often plays a critical role in creating stability in the daily lives of displaced children. However, in environments like Nakivale, education is often less than adequate at promoting either present or future stability.

Addressing Challenges in Nakivale

Most everyone is good at identifying challenges. More important, though, is how to address those challenges. Advocacy workshops held in three refugee-hosting areas in Uganda—Kyaka II refugee settlement, Nakivale refugee settlement, and Kampala—involved stakeholders in planning the way forward. Participants included parents, pupils, teachers, community leaders, UNHCR staff, implementing partner staff, Office of the Prime Minister (OPM) staff, and Ministry of Education representatives (District Education Officers and District Inspectors of Schools).

The aims of these workshops were (1) to present findings from three years of research (available at www.mbeleini.org); (2) to collectively analyse the challenges identified with a focus on advocacy; (3) to train stakeholders at all levels in advocacy strategies; and (4) to develop a way forward for education in displacement in Uganda.

Ten overall priorities emerged from these workshops; they are outlined in “Education and Displacement in Uganda, Advocacy Brief No. 1: Challenges and Ways Forward.” Each site, however, also has its own specific concerns. In Nakivale, the local stakeholders have worked collaboratively to chart a way forward with the goal of activating local, community-based resources to make education better for all children. Their visions and action plan are outlined on the following pages.
Vision

Our vision for education in the Nakivale area is that…

♦ There will be free and universal primary and secondary education;
♦ There will be two secondary schools;
♦ All refugees and nationals who qualify will have access to scholarships for secondary school;
♦ There will be a vocational school;
♦ There will be an increased number of trained teachers in nursery, primary, and secondary schools;
♦ There will be a hardship allowance/top-up for teachers;
♦ All schools will have enough infrastructure: classrooms, furniture, equipment, materials, books, staff housing, water tanks, latrines;
♦ There will be a school feeding program;
♦ A common language of instruction will be established;
♦ 90% of girl children will be enrolled in school;
♦ There will be only a 1% dropout rate;
♦ Children and parents will be sensitised about conflict resolution;
♦ All stakeholders will be fully accountable for their roles;
♦ Education will be of a high quality.

Priorities

Through the identification of priorities from the vision for education, the group developed the following problem statement to guide advocacy in the Nakivale context:

Stakeholders are not fully accountable for their roles. In primary school, there is poor infrastructure in schools, no common language of instruction, and no equal access between genders. Secondary and vocational education are also lacking.
Action Plan

A community meeting was held on September 9, 2005 at which the workshop participants presented the activities of the workshop and their action plan.

Long-term Goal:
We will have overcome the problems identified in the problem statement and have quality education for all refugee and national pupils.
